

Village Street Scene in Stalin's Birthplace

Description

Exterior view of a village street scene with both men and women in view. In the background appears to be some type of a fortress. Location not given. According to Charles Thayer's curriculum vitae: "In 1955 I made an extended tour of European and Asiatic Russia and wrote a series for the Saturday Evening Post on post-Stalinist Soviet Union." Although not identified, this photograph is believed to have been taken during that trip. The location is thought to be Gori, Georgia, located in the Soviet Union at the time. Thayer's diary notes: "The principal landmark of Gori is the old ruined fortress on a small mountain dominating the town." Gori was the birthplace of Joseph Stalin.

Date(s)

November 1955

Accession Number 2008-1783

2.75x4 Black & White

Related Collection Thayer, Charles W. Papers

Keywords Fortification Historic sites Streets Villages

HST Keywords Russia; Soviet Union; Stalin, Joseph - Ref. to

Rights Public Domain - This item is in the public domain and can be used freely without further permission.

Note: If you use this image, rights assessment and attribution are your responsibility.

Harry S. Truman Library & Museum.

Attention media: Please make note of this item's accession number. Print out this page and retain it for your permissions records before downloading this image file for possible publication. Library staff cannot sign permissions forms or provide additional paperwork. The Library charges no usage fees for downloaded images.