Reservoir in Front of a Three Story Building in Nagasaki, Japan

Description
This is a view of a concrete reservoir that was left unharmed in front of a three story building, which is taller than most in Japan. Possibly it is a government building. Water from the reservoir could be used to fight fires. The concrete shell of the building still stands, but the windows were not fireproof and are damaged. The interior walls, floors, and ceilings are very likely made of wood, and have been destroyed. From Basil Rice.

Date(s)
October 1945

Accession Number 2018-132

4x5 inches (10x13 cm) Black & White

Keywords War damage

Rights The Library is unaware of any copyright claims to this item; use at your own risk.

Note: If you use this image, rights assessment and attribution are your responsibility.

Harry S. Truman Library & Museum.

Attention media: Please make note of this item's accession number. Print out this page and retain it for your permissions records before downloading this image file for possible publication. Library staff cannot sign permissions forms or provide additional paperwork. The Library charges no usage fees for downloaded images.