USSR: Advance units of the First Ukrainian Army under Gen. Nikolai Vatutin, pushed across the 1939 Polish border in a general advance that extended in a 150 mile arc west of Kiev. The key rail centers of Korosten and Zhitomir, which have changed hands twice before in the current fighting, were retaken by the Red Army and the advance appeared to be moving along the northwest and southwest branches of the rail lines extending from these important centers. Hundreds of towns were being liberated by the major breakthrough and the movement westward was averaging 10 miles a day.
